"A Close Game at Tucson" reads a headline in the Yuma Morning Examiner, and then goes on to say that the score stood 5 to 5. That was a little bit "close."

Phoenix papers are worrying a great deal about conditions in Globe which they have created out of their imaginations. If it is not allfalfa it is something away from home, and there is no use trying to stop farmers from the habit of worrying.

Professor Lowell, who has an observatory in Flagstaff, says Mars is melting. He must have made this observation after a very hot day on that planet. Perhaps a view from Mars of Phoenix, for instance, might give astronomers of that planet the same impression.

There has not been a time in the past two or three years that there were enough houses in Globe to accommodate the people coming here to live. New residences are being built all the time and they are spoken for long before completed. This summer the situation is even worse than ever before, and what will be the condition when the fall influx sets in? More houses should be built at once, for Globe is going to take on a fall and winter boom that will open the eyes of even the home people. As a field for profitable investment we commend anyone to this city.

Mr. Hearst and his several alleged newspapers are chronic trust busters. They foam in type and rage in caricature and roar in job type at them continually. Hearst, himself, brought some suits against some of them, of which, after they had served their end of advertising him and his papers and his ambitions, nothing was heard. Now he and his Chicago papers are defendants in a suit brought by another paper which refused to join him and some other papers in raising the price of Sunday issues to 6 cents, whereupon the Hearst-made trust notified newsmen everywhere that if they sold the Sunday issue of the refusing paper they could not have the trust papers for sale. Great is humbug.

MISREPRESENTING GLOBE
The Phoenix Democrat recently printed an alleged interview with a Globe man, but the name of the man who is reported to have done the talking is not given. The Silver Belt doubts that any man, knowing the conditions existing in Globe today, could have made the statements printed in the interview.

It is true that there are many foreigners who have come to Globe to work in the mines, but we have had no cause to complain of their conduct here. So far as we know they are men who will become citizens of the United States and exert a loyalty to the country which has opened to them conditions which their country could not give. Among those who have come here, there may be, here and there, one who has brought with him the hatred of government born of loss suffering amongst the lower classes under despotic rulers, but as foreigners understand our form of government they are quick to adopt themselves to the conditions, and in Globe today we can point with pride to hundreds of men who have come here from foreign countries and are amongst our very best citizens.

If there is in Globe any man who does not respect the American flag, who does not appreciate the liberty, the independence and prosperity of this great country, he is a man who has lived long in America—perhaps born here—and received his anarchistic tendencies from home influences. There are agencies at work that are responsible if the foreigner, fresh from his native land, gains a wrong impression of this land. It is with them that the blame lies. They are composed in part of Americans—citizens enjoying the free life of the greatest government under the sun—the freedom which gives to them the right to express those same sentiments. It is this misguided crowd that, trying to make the long man short and the short man long, is breeding in their wild turmoil of unbalanced reasoning a disrespect of our institutions and our flag.

NO "SNAPSHOTS" IN GERMANY

A new German law going into effect shortly will effectually squelch the camera fiend. It will be unlawful to take anybody's picture or a photograph of anybody's property without consent of the party at interest. Even interior views of homes must not include photographs on the walls or tables, without permission. Tourists of Germany, especially if they have come from America, will be incensed to find they can't legally take "snapshots" of peasants or nobles or castles or carriages or boats. For there is never any doubt about the enforcement of law in Germany. However, the American statutes may be, the Teuton nation hasn't any sense of humor on the subject of their laws.

In the United States the kodaker has been tolerated with considerable complacency. True, some women who imagine possession of a fortune or admission into a "smart set" gives them distinction, or criminals of high estate whose cheeks burn under the gaze of a criminal court through, don't like to be "snapped" for the entertainment of readers of the newspapers or magazines. But no law has been made to prevent the practice. Those who object to being photographed are left to their own resources. In fact, the publication of photographs is so common a practice that usage has justified it. It cannot be said that any harm is done by it, and it is doubtful if legislatures can ever be convinced that it ought to be stopped.

THE WORLD MOVES

Editor Waterson has given to his party a slogan. He bids it take for its war cry next year "Back to the Constitution." Senator Daniels, whom Harper's Weekly would like to see president or a Democratic nominee at least, points his party in the same direction. The old school of strict constructionists is to be resuscitated. The powers of the federal government are limited to those specified in the constitution. Applying the familiar rule of law, delegated powers must be strictly construed; nothing taken as implied. All powers not granted are reserved to the states, the strict constructionists assert, "or to the people," the constitution more accurately states.

If "back to the constitution" means a return to the opinions of the powers granted in it to the federal congress that obtained at its adoption; if it means that the construction of courts of the extent of the powers granted are to be reversed, then we have the singular spectacle of Mr. Waterson proposing, in another form, what Mr. Bryan proposed in 1896 and whom Mr. Waterson then opposed. To go back to that concept of the constitution is as plainly a proposal to reverse the evolutionary processes that operate on governments as on all other concerns of men, as was Mr. Bryan's proposition to reverse the same processes that had exhausted silver as a fit money metal and had eliminated it. Both propose retrograde movements when the immutable forces are compelling advance.

Constitutions no more remain hard and fast than do any other creation of men. They are at their best but expressions of the best opinions of the day as to the functions, the limitations, of government. Inevitably they must change in one way or another, by construction of courts if not by amendment, to meet the growth of the nation. Is a constitution more sacred than religion? And how does any religion compare today with that of a century ago? If the latter conforms to evolutionary processes is it not absurd to say that constitutions are immune?

ARIZONA PROSPECTOR

SUCCUMBS TO THIRST

The dead body of Richard Freimann, a prospector who has been living in Tucson and Silver Bell for some months past, was found on the desert in Pinal county near the wagon road leading from Silver Bell to the Jack Rabbit mining camp. The man had evidently died of thirst on the lonely desert, the agonized expression on his face and the distorted position of his body giving ample evidence of the horror of his fate. Freimann left Silver Bell camp in search of work about July 1 with the intention of walking to Jack Rabbit mining camp, where the Tube City Mining company is operating. The body when found was in such a condition that the Indian driver insisted that it was a dead Papago Indian.

Freimann was about 40 years of age and left his home in Germany about five years ago. He entered the employment of a large organ manufacturer and was said to be a musician of considerable talent. He is reported to have played in Sousa's band several years ago. He has lately been a victim of a combination of unfortunate circumstances. In the San Francisco earthquake he lost his wife and three children; in El Paso and New Mexico he had a continuous run of bad luck and finally succumbed to thirst and July's heat on the Arizona desert.

It is reported that the telephone company has commenced repair work on its lines in earnest and that they will be put in first-class shape. This will amount to little unless expert linemen are kept constantly at work. A telephone line was never built that would keep itself in repair and never will be. And this is also true—one man or crew cannot look after the wires from Morienc to Globe.—Solomonville Bulletin.

MARKET FIRM BUT INACTIVE

Harriman Pacifics Show Substantial Rise—Steel Shows a Gain of One Dollar per Share—Coppers Still Weak—Wheat Sells Off at Close.

(By I. N. Kinsey)

GLOBE, July 27.—Paine, Webber & Co. of Boston say: The bank statement showed no change, and failed to cause any interest in the market. Prices ran off shade and then rallied, closing very dull with prices slightly lower than the opening. The treasurer of the Utah Consolidated has just written to a Boston broker a full denial of the story printed in the Boston News Bureau regarding the faulting of the lode. I advise picking up the stock at these prices and believe that with any improvement in the general conditions, it will be one of the leaders on an upward movement.

Greene-Cannana closed weak at $15.87, the lowest it has been for several weeks. Mohawk, North Butte and Copper Range sold off about a point. Helvetia was offered at $5, the lowest it has been since the last call. Nipissing established a new low mark, closing at $10 bid. Superior & Boston is in demand at $3.50 with none offered under $3.75. Globe Consolidated remained strong at $14 bid. Old Dominion opened weak and strengthened with the balance of the list, closing at $44. As soon as the metal market is settled this stock should be due for a substantial rise.
